

RESIDENCE & CAMPUS LIFE

Bay Path University and Cambridge College offer a variety of programs, resources, and activities for students. Students who engage with the campus community, whether it's by participating in activities, connecting with a student organization, or having a campus job, report greater satisfaction with their educational experience and tend to do better academically. It is not necessary to participate in an extraordinary number of activities or organizations; however, finding one meaningful activity where you contribute and connect with other students and with faculty and staff, is of immense value to the quality of your education and skill development.

Bay Path University and Cambridge College offer online programs, with opportunities for online engagement outside of the classroom. Both sites offer in-person instruction for students who want an on-campus experience. Bay Path University also offers a traditional residential college experience for undergraduate women at its Longmeadow campus.

Bay Path University and Cambridge College expect all students, whether commuters, residents, or online, to adhere to established policies and processes with regards to academics and conduct. This section contains policies that are specific to students who live on or frequently spend time on a physical campus location.
